On July 4 of this year, in a sports field high in the hills near Vallombrosa, at the end of the via Bernard Berenson, the team of Villa I Tatti interni triumphed at soccer over the VIT esterni. The score was reported as reaching about 14 to 7. Doubts about the final tally arose from the fact that Osvaldo Tognotti, who was keeping score with pebbles, claimed to have run out of sassolini as the interni goals began to follow with devastating speed. Furthermore, the players, led with determination by I Tatti maggiordomo Alessandro Focosi, were so enthusiastic that they refused to stop, even after time was called repeatedly by a crowd increasingly looking forward to the celebratory supper. The home team graciously allowed the esterni a final goal before agreeing to leave the field. Afterwards everyone adjourned to the house of Tiberio Fantoni, the craftsman responsible for restoring the garden mosaics. Tiberio and his family hosted over 60 people to a meal that was as delicious as it was generous and memorable.

In a calendar as varied and as rich as I Tatti’s, it is difficult to find one event to summarize the qualities of a season, but of all the activities that took place during my current stay at VIT, both before and after my term as Acting Director, the interni/esterni soccer match encapsulated many of the special qualities of the time and of the place. To begin with, the players. In addition to Alessandro Focosi, the line-up of the “internal” team included our cook (Gennaro Napolitano), a member of the household staff (Emiliano Pernice), two gardeners (Claudio Bresci and Paolo Gasparri), a farmer (Marco Pompili) and a former farmer (Raffaele Camarrone), three guards (Paolo Marsili, Lapo Nannini, and Gianni Nocentini), and a Fellow (Silvio Leydi). The “externals” were hardly unknowns: among others they included the electricians responsible for the maintenance of the security system and its computers (Claudio Tozzetti and Stefano Leonessi), the plumber (Franco Stanzoni), and the evening’s host, Tiberio. The twenty players constituted a sample of the range of employees and employers at the Villa—a range that expands along with its ever-increasing activities and growing needs. Even during the six months of my tenure, two new “external” firms have come within the fold to provide essential services. The first has been responsible for the unifying, updating, and maintenance of the data- and word-processing systems at the Villa (while IRIS and Maurizio Gavio continue to keep I Tatti in line on-line). The second will be responsible for implementing the first stages of the Villa’s compliance with the current Italian work safety legislation. I will admit that when we interviewed these firms we failed to ask about their employees’ abilities at football, so we shall have to wait until next year to see if they are willing or able to provide as much of a challenge at sport as they do support at work.

What the game represents to me is not a facile metaphor about teamwork (although there is plenty of that at I Tatti), but the energy, flexibility, and resourcefulness of those making up the “team.” I Tatti is so fortunate in its staff that the actual complexities of its management are hidden by the extraordinary capabilities of its employees. No one could appreciate this more than a Former Fellow temporarily transformed to Acting Director, who benefitted daily from their dedication, skill, and tact. Instances abound to illustrate these qualities. I will cite but two:

The planning for the S. Maria del Fiore conference, for example, which took over two years, not only included the consultation of the international advisory council about its intellectual content, meetings of the I Tatti Academic Committee about the program and publicity, discussions with New York University about its participation, but also the coordination of the kitchen, gardeners, and guards with the administration and library to prepare for the comfort of the participants and the security of the Villa during the conference. Contingency plans were made according to possible climates. On the first day, sudden, heavy rain meant that lunch for over 100 people, set on the terrace, had to be moved within minutes.

Continued on page 2
qualities of her character. I will never forget standing by her stretcher as she was about to leave the hospital in an ambulance to fly home and discussing the cultural-anthropological interpretation of the family in Vasari's Lives of the Artists. Stunned and pained as she was, Christiane never failed in her grace, good humor, or wit. The Villa, too, showed to its best. Susan Bates, Antonio Fazzini, and Nelda Ferace, assisted by Allen Grecco and Daniela Lamberini (VIT '86), dealt with international insurance agencies and hospital bureaucracy as though it were their daily routine — arranging a portable phone, making the necessary contacts, and seeing that all was done as comfortably and speedily as possible.

There is another feature of the soccer match that deserves comment and that prompts reflection. The 1997 game was the third played in honor of Franco Montemurro, a young builder who died in 1994. The annual in memoriam soccer match looks like becoming a tradition. It was my term at I Tatti, bracketed as it was by the celebration of Liliana Ciullini's fifty years of service (see page 20) and Signor Giovannetti's funeral (see page 17), was a season for thinking about continuity and change at the Harvard Center. The memories that form its traditions span many generations and some now deserve careful recollection. Drafting a grant proposal for a digitized catalogue of the Fototeca and working on Berenson's collection as part of my own research on American collecting of Renaissance art, I learned much about the historical logic of the house and its holdings. Having the extraordinary privilege of staying in the Villa, I came to understand how traditions of intellectual curiosity and generous hospitality are integrally bound into its daily routines. This was indeed a memorable time for me and I hope for those that shared it. Some of its principal events are described in this Newsletter. I am grateful to everyone who helped to shape those memories in the many remarkable, even if unrecorded, moments of the past six months.

Patricia Rubin
Acting Director

---

I TATTI COMMUNITY 1996-97

Follows

CARMEN BAMBAKH CAPELL (Metropolitan Museum of Art, Art History). "Leonardo and the Language of Drawing in the Renaissance."

MARIA LUISA CERRON PUGA (Università di Roma, La Sapienza), Literature. "Italian Petrarchist Analogies: History and Structure."

ISABELLE CHEBOT (European University Institute), History. "La dotte delle famiglie - Femmes, lignages et patrimonio a Florence aux XIV et XV siècles."

VIRGINIA COX (Christ's College, Cambridge), History. "Rhetoric and Political Thought in Italy, 1250-1600."

WILHEM DE BOER (Indiana University), History. "Sinews of Discipline: The Uses of Confession in Counter-Reformation Italy (1550-1630)."

GIULIANO DI BACCO (Università di Pavia), Music. "Teoria e cultura musicale a Firenze e in Toscana nel tardo Medioevo."

ANGELA FRITSEN (St Louis University), Literature. "Ovid's Fasti in the Renaissance: Literary and Scientific Reception."

MEGAN HOLMES (The Johns Hopkins University), Art History. "Studies in Fifteenth-Century Florentine Art and Society."

SILVIO LEYDI (Università di Torino), History. "Immagini imperiali e consenso politico nella Milano spagnola del XVI secolo."

KATHERINE J. P. LOWE (University of London), History. "Nuns' Chronicles and Convent Culture in Renaissance and Counter-Reformation Italy."

GIOVANNA RABITTI (Università di Firenze), Literature. "Percorsi evolutivi e ricezione della poesia femminile nel Cinquecento italiano da Vittoria Colonna a Isabella Andreini."

EVE SANDERS (McGill University), Literature. "Gender, Literacy, and the Theater: The Case of the Connubio dell'Arte."

ADA V. SIGRE (Israel Institute of Technology), Art History. "The Design of Flower Gardens, Knot Gardens and parterres de broderie during the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries."

ALISON JANE WRIGHT (University College London), Art History. "The Work of Antonio and Piero Pollaiuolo as Designers, Goldsmiths and Sculptors."

ANDREA ZORZI (Università di Firenze), History. "Le rappresentazioni della giustizia nelle città italiane dei secoli XIII-XVI."

---

Mellon Research Fellows:

JAN CHLÍBEC (Narodni Gallery, Prague), Art History. "Italian Renaissance Sculpture in Czech State and Private Collections."

KÁRA PAJOREN (Hungarian Academy of Sciences, Budapest), Literature. "Fifteenth-century Humanist Literary Criticism."

Continued on page 6
I Tatti Community 1996-97

Continued from page 3

Guest Scholars

BETTINA TALVACCHIA (University of Connecticut), Art History. "Il destino della donna tra Rinascimento e Controriforma: monaca, moglie, serva o cortigiana?"

Visiting Professors:

PHILIP R. GAVITT (St. Louis University), History. "Inventing the Renaissance: Vincenzo Borghini and Medici Patronage."

F. W. KENT (first semester) (Monash University), History. "A Biography Of Lorenzo De' Medici."

JOHN PADGETT (University of Chicago), History. "Political Parties and Social Networks in Renaissance Florence."

CHRISTOPHER ALAN REYNOLDS (first semester) (University of California at Davis), Music. "Musical Design in the Madrigals of Gesualdo and Marenzio."

LAWRENCE E. SULLIVAN (Harvard University), History. "Renaissance Occult Sciences and the Religions of the World."

Research Associates

FABIO BROGI (Università di Siena), Art History. "Studi di iconografia."

LENA BOZONI (Università di Pisa), Literature. "Una poetica poesia nella letteratura italiana fra Cinque e Settecento."

RICCARDO BRUSCAGLI (Università di Firenze), Literature. "Lirica dell'ultimo 500 dalla battaglia di Lepanto in poi."

SALVATORE CAMPOREALE (The Johns Hopkins University), History. "La cancelleria di Carlo Marsuppini (1444-1453)."

GINO CORTI (Emeritus) (Villa I Tatti), Palaeography & History. "Lorenzo de' Medici, collezionista di antichità."

LAURA CORTI (Istituto Universitario di Architettura di Venezia), Art History. "Illustrated Thesaurus of Architectonic Terms Found in Architectural Treatises."

ALESSANDRA GRECO (Villa I Tatti), History. "Food for Thought and Food for the Table: A Social and Cultural History of Alimentary Habits and their Significance in Renaissance Italy (1350-1550)."

MARGARET HAINES (Opere di Santa Maria del Fiore), Art History. "Edition and Database of the Documentation of the Florentine Opera del Duomo during the Cupola Period."

JULIAN KLEEMANN (Biblioteca Hertziana), Art History. "Antique Descriptions of Paintings and their Influence on 16th and 17th-century Art and Art Theory."

SVENNA SEDEL-MENCHI (Università di Trento), History. 1) "Biblioteca Erasmiana Italica: Sixteenth-Century Italian Editions of Erasmus' Work," 2) "Erasmus, Iulus exclusus et coelis: Critical Text, Translation and Annotation."

MARCO SPALLANZANI (Università di Firenze), History. "Relations between Florence and Islam during the 14th-16th Centuries: Decorative Arts."

I Tatti is proud to announce that The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation has recently awarded the Harvard Center a 1:1 challenge grant of $900,000 for the Biblioteca Berenson. Two thirds of this fund will be used to endow a position in the library, and the remainder will establish a library conservation fund.

This will be the third endowed position in the Biblioteca Berenson, the other two being the Nicky Mariano Librarian (most recently held by Assunta Pisani) and the Agnes Mongan Curator for the Fototeca Berenson (currently Fiorella Superbi). This important new position will be held by Amanda George, who after 25 years of service at I Tatti has an unparalleled knowledge of the library. She will continue her current responsibilities for the daily management of the library, which include overseeing public services, acquisitions, and cataloguing functions, as well as developing and maintaining the documentation on the library's automated and manual procedures, assisting with staff training, managing the acquisitions, equipment, and services budgets, coordinating the library's gifts and exchanges program, participating in collection development as a member of the library's acquisitions committee, and consulting regularly with Fellows and other appointees to determine their research needs.

The remaining matched grant of $600,000 will be used to establish a new, endowed fund for library conservation. The income from this fund will provide for repairing and rebinding damaged books, microfilming those which have become too brittle to repair, binding periodicals, and it will also help pay for some climate control in certain areas of the library.

As we go to print, I Tatti has raised $300,000 in gifts and pledges towards this exciting challenge. We are well on our way to completing this goal before the deadline next summer. Everyone connected with the Harvard Center is profoundly grateful to The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation for this extraordinary opportunity which offers I Tatti the chance to address in meaningful ways the present and future welfare of the library. The Biblioteca Berenson is a thriving library and a key resource in supporting the advanced research and the interdisciplinary exchange of ideas that make I Tatti so unique.

Council members
Bill Hood, Mary Gibbons, and
Chairman Debby Brice with Acting Director Pat Rubin
at the New York
I Tatti Council meeting.

AUTUMN 1997
Several developments in the Biblioteca Berenson have made the past year a rather interesting one for all of us. By labeling and re-arranging the bound periodicals, we completed the rearrangement of books according to the new classification scheme. Like monographs, these can now be located by their new Library of Congress call numbers, and should, as a result, be easier to find than was previously the case.

In addition, the books in the House (with some important exceptions, such as the Orientalia in the Director's office and French Literature in the French Library which remain as they are), were rearranged according to their new numbers and the sequence of their arrangement was made considerably more rational and understandable.

Acquisitions

The Acquisitions Committee worked intensely to recover lost ground from the previous two years' reorganizing of the collection and the disruption caused by the rewiring project. The committee devoted increased attention to the matter of acquisitions and was able to catch up completely with the review, selection, and ordering of the titles deemed desirable and which the current acquisitions budget can afford.

Many important acquisitions were made, two of which at least, in the area of art and history of Venice and the Veneto, are worthy of mention here. The first is the multi-volume Storia di Venezia, which is published by the Istituto della Enciclopedia Italiana, in collaboration with the Fondazione Giorgio Cini of Venice, and includes contributions by leading experts in the field. This monumental work, of which the last of the projected eleven volumes are about to be released, is organized chronologically but also includes two large thematic volumes dedicated to art and to the sea.

The second important acquisition is the impressive publication on Jacopo Bassano edited by Alessandro Ballarin, a distinguished art historian whose work has been primarily devoted to Renaissance painting in the Veneto. Published by Bertoncello Arto Grafiche, this work is issued as part of a series on Renaissance painting in Northern Italy, a series distinguished for the superlative quality of its production and the abundance of its illustrations.

Book Conservation

In the course of the past year we began a project to conserve and restore the older and rarer materials in the library. We hope to launch this project on a much larger scale in the future for the rest of the collection. Thus far, the volumes shelved in the corridor of the House and in the French Library have been reviewed by the expert conservator, Ann Hepper, who has been helping us for some years with the occasional restoration of books in need of repair. One of the conservation measures for many leather-bound volumes in the House was treatment of the leather with a special dressing to prevent further flaking of the binding and to protect them from insects. Approximately 100 books with damaged bindings were repaired. Ms. Hepper's systematic review of the books in the House led to the discovery of some valuable notes inserted in the books and of some interesting inscriptions relating to the Berensons. One example deserving mention is the vol-

Continued on page 10

It is with a sense of genuine pride and heartfelt congratulations, tinged however with a very profound regret, that I announce to the I Tatti community the appointment of Assunta Pisani to the position of Assistant University Librarian for Collection Development at Stanford University.

The loss to this institution and to the IRIS consortium is immeasurable. Under her direction, the Biblioteca Berenson has been transformed into an efficiently organized, thoughtfully administered research library equipped for the twenty-first century; she has also played the leading role in establishing, developing, and sustaining the important IRIS consortium of libraries in Florence. Her selection for this prestigious post at Stanford is merely confirmation of what all of us here know from first-hand experience—that she is one of the outstanding librarians in the world today.

I Tatti has been singularly fortunate to have had her wise counsel and skilled guidance in these past years. For Fellows, visiting scholars, readers, and colleagues she has been a generous, caring, helpful associate; for all of us she will continue to be a beloved friend. As she embarks on this exciting new undertaking, we can only thank her for having given us so very much. I know that all of us wish her well in the important and challenging new position she has accepted, and I have no doubt that everyone will wish to join me in expressing the hope that she and Pier Paolo will return to Italy and I Tatti often. They will always be esteemed members of this community, and I personally will miss greatly their cheerful presence, their unfailing support, and their boundlessly generous friendship.

WALTER KAISER
Director

Assunta's departure from I Tatti will mark the 20th anniversary of her arrival at Harvard in August 1977.
The Biblioteca Berenson
Continued from page 7

ume Iconografia di Giovanni Angelo Canini, printed in Rome in 1669, which contained a card from Logan Peatsall Smith declaring the book to be his personal wedding present to his sister Mary and to Bernard Berenson.

NEW STAFF

We were fortunate to be able to avail ourselves of the valuable help of Michael Rocke (VIT’91) as a library assistant appointed on a temporary basis to replace Andrea Todorow who left last September. Michael is a historian of Renaissance Florence and a former I Tatti Fellow, whose recently published book, Forbidden Friendships: Homosexuality and Male Culture in Renaissance Florence, has attracted international interest and acclaim. He brings to his work not only a command of Renaissance history but also valuable insights about the expectations of scholars making use of our research resources.

We are tremendously pleased, moreover, to have been able to secure the return of Margaret D’Ambrosio, our cataloguing expert from the Smithsonian Institution Libraries for an additional two-year term. Margaret, who worked for us in 1995, returned in January 1997 as the cataloguing specialist for the IRIS consortium, an important position funded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation as part of the funding for the second phase of our project to connect with Florentine libraries. Her knowledge and expertise in all matters relating to bibliographic standards and her delightful disposition make her presence an important factor in ensuring the necessary coordination in cataloguing practice and in the delivery of bibliographic information among the member libraries. We are indeed fortunate to have both Michael and Margaret on board.

IRIS

The second phase of the IRIS consortium of Florentine libraries began with a concerted effort to encourage additional libraries to join. Further funding from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation will support their automation efforts and their subsequent participation in the shared on-line catalogue.

As a result, by far the most important event this past year was the entry of the Istituto Nazionale di Studi sul Rinascimento as a new member of IRIS. For the libraries of I Tatti and the Istituto to enter into partnership and engage in cooperation is, I believe, a major development for Renaissance studies in Florence. This distinguished institution, with its extraordinary holdings, has not only joined with us to automate its operations for current and future holdings, but its top priority now is to engage in a retrospective conversion project that will, within the next few months, make all its holdings available on-line to other institutions.

The library of the Nederlands Interuniversitair Kunsthistorisch Instituut continues apace its retrospective conversion project. Many of their records are now available in the catalogue, and all of them will be available by summer 1998. With the addition of member-libraries’ current and retrospective holdings, the IRIS database is further enriched and fulfills the ideal of this joint venture: cooperation between scholarly institutions and dissemination of resources to the scholarly community.

The consortium has also been a test site for the development of an important new release of the ALEPH system, which incorporates many of the needs expressed by our consortium and by a large number of U.S. libraries for which international bibliographic standards are crucial. The new release, which will be called ALEPH 500, is currently available in our catalogue in a test mode and is scheduled for release towards the end of the year.

The major part of the project began last fall to create a multi-lingual thesaurus for subject headings in the shared IRIS catalogue was accomplished during the first part of this year. The goal of the project was to provide an Italian equivalent for each English language subject term thus providing equal subject access across languages. Temporary staff with relevant subject knowledge and proficiency in both the English and Italian languages were hired for the translations (and included former Fellow Patrizia Salvadori (VIT’95). Valerio Pacini was responsible for selecting the terms for translation and for the daily supervision and revision of the translations, while Margaret D’Ambrosio managed the project, and Maurizio Gavioli, IRIS systems manager, provided the necessary systems support.

* Assunta Pisani
Assistant Director for the Biblioteca Berenson
Nicky Mariano Librarian

Giovanni Pagliarollo, Antonio Fazzini, and Michael Rocke sport their batik shirts from Indonesia.

Autumn 1997
News from the Berenson Collection

As he does every year, the conservator Alfio del Serra checked the state of the pictures in the Berenson collection. In general, their condition is good, except for one or two small details on the two landscapes by Zuccarelli which had to be attended to, as well as a larger project to consolidate the wooden support on the back of the St. Francis by Paolo Veneziano. At the same time, Del Serra and his assistant, Renato Castellani, touched up a few of the frames and revarnished pictures by Ercole Roberti, Luca Signorelli, and Giovanni di Paolo.

Dr. Maria Clelia Galassi (researcher at the University of Udine), who for some time has been using infrared reflectography to research the underdrawings of 15th-century Italian paintings, came to I Tatti last April to examine two paintings in the Berenson collection which are of particular importance to her studies: the Madonna with Child and Angels by Vincenzo Foppa, and the Madonna and Child by Domenico Veneziano. Both proved to be typical examples of the artists’ ways of using underdrawing: Foppa modelling the forms as well as outlining the figures, Domenico Veneziano mainly limiting the drawing to a fine outline. Close examination also provided the good news that the Domenico Veneziano is in particularly good condition. This examination was also of special interest to Carmen Bambach (VIT’97) whose own research on techniques of transferring drawings gives her considerable expertise on the subject of underdrawing in paintings.

* Fiorella Goffredi Superbi
Agnes Mongan Curator of the Fototeca Berenson
Curator of the Berenson Collection and Archive

Recent Acquisitions

Among the many recent additions to the Library, whether purchased by one of the endowed book funds, from donations given by the Friends of the Biblioteca Berenson, or given directly, are the following recent publications by former Fellows. Please forgive us if, due to space limitations, your volume is not listed.

Riccardo Fubini (VIT’65,’73). Quattrocento fiorentino: politica dipломazia cultura, Ospedaletto (Pisa), Pacini, 1996.
Olga Pujmanová (VIT’94,’95). Arte rinascimentale italiana nelle collezione ebo: pitture e scul-
NEWS FROM THE FOTOTEC A BERENSON

The J. Paul Getty Trust has shown a keen interest in the Berenson Fototeca and has, over a period of more than ten years, acquired copies of most of its photographs for their own collection. Last summer they provided funding for an expert in photograph conservation and restoration, Professor Debra P. Norris of the University of Delaware, to come to Florence to examine the collection. From her detailed report, we were pleased to learn that the photographs and other images held in the Berenson Fototeca are in good condition. She confirmed the importance of our policies of replacing the folders in which the photographs are kept with acid-free ones and of removing the most delicate or damaged images from general circulation.

Last November the J. Paul Getty Grant Program funded a small, two-day conference to investigate the use and conservation of the Fototeca and to determine the most intelligent way of planning for its future. Silvia Berselli (Studio Berselli, Milan), James M. Bower (The Getty Art History Information Program), Laura Corti (VIT '85-'98), Istituto Universitario di Architettura di Venezia), Everett Fahy (VIT '65-'66, Metropolitan Museum of Art), Peter Humfrey (VIT '88, '91), University of St. Andrews, Scotland), Carlo Jacob (Università per Stranieri, Perugia), Bert W. Meijer (Nederlands Interuniversitair Kunsthistorisch Instituut, Florence), Debra P. Norris (University of Delaware), and Grant Romer (George Eastman House) were invited to attend, along with various members of the I Tatti staff. The major matters discussed were acquisition policy, access issues, and the conservation of the collection. The consensus was that I Tatti should continue to focus on completing Berenson's lists of Italian painting and Florentine drawing from the 13th through the 16th centuries. This confirms our established policy, although the Berenson Fototeca has always welcomed offers of other material. Conference attendees unanimously agreed that an on-line catalogue providing digitized images of the entire collection would address two urgent issues by simultaneously increasing access to photographs and other visual material while providing greater protection of the originals. Among the recommendations for conserving the collection was the provision of a climate-controlled environment for correct storage. A recommendation to monitor the temperature and humidity in the Fototeca for at least eighteen months before attempting to climate the space was seconded by Sig. Boddi of the Settore Climatologico e Conservazione Preventiva, Opificio delle Pietre Dure, here in Florence. In addition, I Tatti was urged to improve the way photographs are handled by researchers (e.g. by wearing gloves), all the more so given their importance as historical artifacts in themselves.

In May, a small exhibition of important photographs of works of art held at the Fogg Museum was mounted in the Fototeca in honor of the visit by the Fogg Fellows to I Tatti. The exhibition illustrated the photographs' importance for Berenson and how he used them for his work. The interest aroused by the exhibition spurred us to repeat it for the Fellows and other local scholars, enriching the selection with photographic curiosities and examples of the variety of material stored in the Berenson Fototeca.

We are grateful to Stuart Denenberg, whose 205 black and white photographs donated to the Fototeca this past year will enrich the existing collection.

* FIORELLA GIOFFREDI SUPERBI
Agnes Mongan Curator of the Fototeca Berenson
Curator of the Berenson Collection and Archive
Research Associate Eve Barsook (center) sits with Elizabeth and Gordon Morrill.

THE MORRILL MUSIC LIBRARY

This year's music Fellow, Giuliano di Bacco, came to study the sources of late medieval music theory in Florence and Tuscany as the first part of a more extensive research program reviewing the entire corpus of Italian theoretical manuscripts to the end of the fifteenth century. To date, scholars have limited their review of these sources to a study of theoretical content alone. The manuscripts, however, often show specific characteristics of their scribes or owners through which it is possible to attempt to establish their identity or, at least, the historical and social context of the documents themselves. Having achieved significant results in the first part of his research, i.e. Florence and Tuscany, Giuliano now intends to study the circulation of this form of written culture in late medieval and Renaissance Italy.

The Morrill Music Library is the fortunate possessor of the Armen Carapetyan Microfilm Collection, donated by this distinguished scholar in 1975. After systematic expansion, readers are now able to access some 1,500 medieval and Renaissance manuscript sources on film. Giuliano di Bacco’s research project has provided an ideal opportunity to add to our holdings on film of theoretical sources. To the original Carapetyan holdings (already a remarkable collection in itself), we have added some 25 manuscripts of late medieval theory from the Bibliothèque Nationale (Paris), the Archives Nationales (Paris), the Newberry Library (Chicago), the Biblioteca Capitular y Colombina (Seville), the Bibliothèque Royale (Brussels), the Bodleian Library (Oxford), and the British Library (London). Other additions to the Microfilm Collection include 70 early music prints, for the most part Italian secular vocal music dating from between 1570 and 1630, and a number of important manuscripts of Renaissance vocal music from libraries in Pavia, Piacenza, Venice and Udine. Difficulty of access to some Italian libraries makes the Carapetyan Collection particularly appreciated by our readers. For those who are frustrated by the lengthy closure of the Biblioteca Ambrosiana in Milan, we can, for example, offer access to some 53 music manuscripts found in that library.

Kathryn Bosi
Music Librarian

---

THE STORY OF VILLA I TATTI

Well over one hundred friends of I Tatti attended a reception at the Pierpont Morgan Library in New York City last April to listen to Professor William Weaver reminisce about I Tatti. Professor Weaver, who is not only a well-known translator of contemporary Italian literature, a music critic and broadcaster, and full-time teacher at Bard College, but is also the author of A Legacy of Excellence: the Story of Villa I Tatti (Abrams, 1997), entertained the gathering with stories of his first visit to I Tatti when he met Bernard Berenson, and his subsequent close association with the Villa both during Mr. Berenson’s life and since I Tatti has become the Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies. Among the audience were David Finn and David Morowitz whose splendid photographs grace this handsome book.

With bravura and generosity, Professor Weaver translated those memories into Italian for the I Tatti community in June at a book-signing party, when copies of the book were given to members of the I Tatti staff.

Bill Weaver autographs a copy of his book for Fiorella Superbi Giordani.
Conference on S. Margherita da Cortona

That saints really begin life only after their death and can retain remarkable vigor for centuries to come, was the premise of an intensive giornata di studio at Villa I Tatti dedicated to Santa Margherita da Cortona tu spiritualità ed arte dal XIV al XX secolo (20 March 1997). As Acting Director Patricia Rubin suggested in her opening words, the seventh century of Margherita’s death offered the opportunity not only to confirm the intrinsic interest of her figure, cult, and artistic legacy, but also to explore a range of general problems in the study of sanctity, female religion, and representation. The ensuing lectures proved the point. Margherita’s complex relationship with the Franciscans exemplifies the uncertain status a medieval female mystic could have (Servus Gieben). This relationship was also crucial in shaping the saint’s memory, both in the early hagiography (Anna Benvenuti) and iconography (Joanna Cannon). Along with the politics of memory came the management of the cult: variable civic and ecclesiastical interests determined the fate of the late-medieval sanctuary at Cortona (André Vauche). But the key condition for survival, Margherita’s canonization, was fulfilled only in the early modern period, as aristocratic interest in her cult increased (Manuela Belardini) and her iconography was made to fit Counter-Reformation standards of style and taste (Riccardo Spinelli, VIT’94). Ever since, the corpus of Margheritan texts (Laura Battistelli and Pietro Clemente) and images (Laura Corti, VIT’85–’98) has continued to grow, demonstrating the variety of strategies to ‘order’ the saint and her life, as well as the longevity of her inspiration. The timeliness and relevance of these studies became clear during lively discussions with the audience, coordinated by Chiara Frugoni (VIT’83) and Fabio Bisogni (VIT’73–98).

Wiete de Boer
Robert Lehman Fellow

Former Fellows Update ⬇

Creighton E. Gilbert (VIT’63,’68), professor of the history of art at Yale University where he has taught since 1981, received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from the University of Louisville in February 1997 for his contributions — local, national, and international — in the field of art history. Professor Gilbert taught at the University of Louisville from 1948 to 1956.

John Law (VIT’95), senior lecturer in history at the University of Wales, Swansea, has become editor of Renaissance Studies (published by Oxford University Press and the Society for Renaissance Studies), having been associate editor of the journal for the last ten years. A special issue of Renaissance Studies, planned for the year 2000, will be dedicated to the theme of “Concepts of time, the future and change in the Renaissance.” Dr. Law, who has been asked to serve as an advisory editor for the new Oxford Companion to the Renaissance, is also co-editor, with Dr. Paolo Rossi, of a “Who’s Who in the Renaissance,” to be published by Routledge. In addition, his “Historical Introduction” to the Blue Guide to Northern Italy has just been published, the bulk of that volume being the work of Alta MacAdam who has been associated with I Tatti as an outside consultant for almost two decades.
In early September 1996, I Tatti made one single exception to its inviolate policy of never holding book presentations. Gli Affreschi del Beato Angelico nel Convento di San Marco a Firenze was edited by Daniela Dini, who assisted her father, Dino Dini, in the restoration of Beato Angelico’s frescoes at San Marco. Some 175 people gathered in the Myron and Sheila Gilmore Limonaia to learn more about the handsome book and the extraordinary achievement of restoration to which it bears witness. Maria De Peverelli first introduced restorer Daniela Dini who illustrated her talk with beautiful color slides of the restoration campaign. She was followed by Enzo Ferroni, Miklos Boskovits (VIT’71-’73), and Antonio Paolucci, who spoke on various aspects of the restoration and of the extraordinary personality and technical capability of Dino Dino. The audience was captivated by the variety of the talks. The morning’s celebration ended with a buffet lunch on the terrace.

The occasion, which was co-sponsored by the Thyssen-Bornemisza Foundation who sponsored the restorations and the publication of the lavishly illustrated volume, was dedicated to the memory of the German scholar and art historian, Hanna Kiel. Doctoresse Kiel had based most of her scholarly career at I Tatti in the Biblioteca Berenson, where she faithfully translated Mr. Berenson’s books into German, pursued her own research, and wrote her own books. For many years, she was a familiar and beloved member of the I Tatti community, occupying every day, year after year, the same table in the library.

It was she who initially interested Baron Thyssen in sponsoring the San Marco restorations, and it was to honor her that he established at I Tatti the fellowship which bears her name. In a letter Baron Thyssen sent to Walter Kaiser just before the book presentation, he wrote, “I remember with pleasure the days spent with Hanna Kiel and Dino Dini in the convent of San Marco and am convinced that it is thanks to them that I understood, at least in part, the spirit of the Florentine Renaissance.”

VISIT TO VARALLO

In late May, Fellow Silvio Leydi and his wife, art historian, Rossana Sacchi, led an I Tatti group on a pilgrimage to the Sacro Monte at Varallo. Following an itinerary developed in the course of the sixteenth century, this band of visitors became witnesses to the life of Christ recreated in sculpted scenes. Rossana, an expert in the art of North Italy, explained the genesis of the sacro monte from a direct imitation of the sites of the Holy Land (when it originated in the late fifteenth century) to a more carefully controlled set of spiritual exercises orchestrated in the service of the Catholic Reform. Fellow Wiete de Boer, whose current project is on confession in the Counter-Reformation, was not only able to instruct the group on the interventions and intentions of the influential Cardinal Carlo Borromeo, but was also able to inspect Borromeo’s bed. The cardinal had spent the last nights of his life there. Caught in a storm when still in the area, he died of pneumonia before reaching Milan. No such dramatic episodes occurred during the group’s visit. All were able to enjoy Silvio and Rossana’s hospitality at Lago di Orta and to take a further excursion to the Isola di San Giulio a Orta, to admire the Romanesque pulpit in that church.

* PATRICIA RUBIN
Acting Director

Wiete De Boer, René Barmeser, Giudiano Di Baccio, Silvio Leydi, and Rossana Sacchi.
Among the events organized by I Tatti Fellows last year was a series of lively conversations about the study of gender in the Renaissance. The three meetings, which convened in the Gabriele Geier Granario, brought together Fellows and staff from I Tatti, along with members of the research community in Florence, to consider the social positions, devotional practices, economic contributions, and cultural expressions of men and women in early modern society. Topics ranged from periodization (how useful is the notion of a break with a medieval past?), to geography (what accounts for the contrasts between rules and practices found in different locales, Florence versus Venice?), to academic disciplines (how do ways of seeing events, objects, and texts vary between fields?). The discussion that followed, spilling over into dinner and dessert, provided the opportunity for participants from all fields of Renaissance studies to exchange ideas and explore areas for interdisciplinary collaboration.

The diversity of expertise represented at the meetings was reflected in the wide-ranging course of the conversation. During the first evening in March, in which participants discussed their work, the subjects raised included embroidery pattern books used by male artists in Venice, homosexual behavior in Florence, a mystic nun who belonged to the second Roman academy, Leonardo da Vinci’s drawings of female anatomy, the design of gardens and the names given flowers, male and female donor portraits, links between male castelli and female singers, emblem books and books of hours, and Mary Berenson.

The April meeting centered on the contrasting ways in which gender difference was imagined and lived in diverse parts of Italy. Attention to the specificity of place, it was agreed, was enormously important. Social configurations, political systems, labor markets, and legal codes varied markedly from city to city. A distance of forty miles could make all the difference, as in the case of Florence and Siena; Florentine women faced many more restrictions than did their Sieneese counterparts. Yet, as Virginia Cox, a Fellow in Literature reminded us, those same geographical boundaries, while adamantly particularized, were also porous. Vittoria Colonna, who was from an elite Neapolitan background, influenced women in distant parts of Italy. Sieneese women poets were among those who modeled their writings and self-presentation after her example.

Finally, the May meeting opened a dialogue about academic disciplines. The co-organizers of the discussion series, Fellows Megan Holmec and Eve Sanders, who teach in Art History and Literature departments, along with a Fellow in Classics, Angela Fritsen, spoke about gender-related courses they had designed. The conversation then turned from pedagogy to portraiture. Fellow Alison Wright discussed recent arguments about profile portraits of women as a point of departure for raising an important methodological question: what resources are available for determining the meaning of such portraits? One has to take into account the differences in portrait types and, to the extent that it is possible, changes in reception between the 1450s and the 1530s. The traditional sin of art history, she argued, has been the assumption that looking at beautiful women is natural rather than a mode of viewing female subjects formulated in specific ways in the Renaissance.

Gender in the Granario, as Acting Director Pat Rubin titled these events, sparked debate and dialogue. A bound set of the materials collected from participants at the three meetings—articles, bibliographies, and class syllabi—will be available for consultation in the Biblioteca Berenson.

In addition to the Gender in the Granario series, a number of I Tatti Fellows, current and former, spoke on topics relating to gender issues at different lectures and conferences during the year. At the University of Florence, Fellow Kate Lawe gave a paper entitled “A comparison of Nun’s Ceremonies as Brides of Christ and Secular Wedding Rituals -15th and 16th centuries.” Bette Tafrochka (VT’96/97), Julian Klemann (VT’86-’98), Sarah Matthews Grieco (VT’94), Patricia Rubin (VT’87, 90, ’93, ’97), Lucia Sandri (VT’96), Elisa Weaver (VT’89), and Giulia Cabi (VT’87) spoke or presided at sessions in a symposium organized by Sarah Matthews Grieco entitled “Vita è immagine della donna tra rinascimento e controriforma: monaca, moglie, serva, cortigiana?” at Syracuse University’s Florence Program.
An international symposium on the sculpture of Santa Maria del Fiore, organized by Villa I Tatti and New York University's Villa La Pietra, on the occasion of the seventh centenary of the foundation of the cathedral of Florence, filled the Gilmore Limonaia with a large and distinguished audience for both days of the program on June 5 and 6, 1997. The event was fittingly dedicated to the memory of Sir John Pope-Hennessy, both in recognition of his fundamental contributions to the study of Italian sculpture and in acknowledgment of his special interest and support for the two participating institutions. It constituted the inaugural instance of academic collaboration between I Tatti and the new center of Villa La Pietra, founded with the legacy of Sir Harold Acton.

The conference was articulated in four thematic sessions, each chaired by a member of the planning committee, and consisting of four lectures followed by discussion. Kathleen Weil-Garris Brandt of New York University presided over the first session, "The Choice of Sculpture," which opened with Antje Middeldorf Kosegarten's paper, "Remarks on Some Medieval Descriptions of Sculpture," a fascinating survey of sources on the medieval view of sculptural decoration and its significance, seen as generated both by literary models and visual perception. Gert Kreytenberg's (VIT '88) paper introduced the early campaigns of sculpture in Santa Maria del Fiore and showed how a Florentine school of sculptors was forged by the demands of the cathedral and the oratory of Ossanmichele. "The Power of Illusion" was the title of Eve Borsook's (VIT '82-98) contribution on the fictive tombs of Santa Maria del Fiore, in which the desire for sculptural celebration of civic heroes was strong enough to demand the illusion of three-dimensional works even when the choice ultimately fell upon the more economical and expedient medium of mural painting. Finally, Shelley Zuraw's paper on Mino da Fiesole's lost model explored the matter of the cathedral's unfinished façade, Arnolfo's challenging legacy to the Renaissance.

"The Meaning of Sculpture," chaired by Timothy Verdon, included Mary Bergstein's interpretation of Nanni di Banco's Porta della Mandorla as an Albertian istoria, and Mario Scalini's vision of the bronze sacristy doors as a response to Byzantine taste generated in the context of the Council of Florence. Doris Carl uncovered the classicizing intentions of the celebratory portraits of men of the arts introduced in the cathedral in the later XV century, and Michael Amy explained how the consideration of the intended position of Michelangelo's unfinished St. Matthew unleashes the meaning contained in its posture and gesture.

The second day of proceedings opened with the session "The Making of Sculpture" chaired by Margaret Haines (VIT '76, '88-98). Enrica Neri Lusanna offered a remarkable reconstruction of architectural elements of Arnolfo di Cambio's original façade and illustrated how this work became a school to succeeding generations of sculptors. Louis Frank Mustari discussed the working conditions — contracts, payments, controls — of sculptors employed by the cathedral in the XIV century. The identification of Donatello's first prophet for the tribune buttresses with the so-called "pathetic" prophet subsequently emplaced on the campanile, and its acceptance by Pope-Hennessy, was the point of departure for Luciano Bellorsi's examination of the genesis of artist's early style in works for Santa Maria del Fiore. Finally, Louis Waldman described how Baccio Bandinelli was installed as grand-ducal favorite in the ancient institution of the strated methods of restoration and duplication of damaged carvings. This was followed by a special opening of the Opera's museum, where participants could share reflections in the presence of the dense population of sculptural masterpieces there contained.

On Friday evening, Villa La Pietra offered a gala supper for speakers, chairs, committee members, fellows, and distinguished members of the local community. For this occasion, several of the ground floor rooms of Sir Harold's great villa, with their rich collection of furniture and art objects, were restored and opened to the delighted guests. But the beautiful early summer evening was also a compelling attraction: cocktails were served on the terrace overlooking the garden and supper in the side garden.

The following morning, two special visits were arranged for speakers and session chairs. The first was to the Torrigiani palace and garden, where Enrica Neri Lusanna presented an important statue from the Arnolfian façade in this little-known collection, and Gert Kreytenberg discussed the two angels from Tino da Camaino's tomb of the Bishop Orsi. From there the party proceeded to the Opificio delle Pietre Dure where Giorgio Bonsanti showed participants Donatello's Habakkuk recently transferred to the laboratory for cleaning, as well as other works currently under restoration, notably Ghiberti's Gates of Paradise.

For the success of the event, special thanks are due to my colleagues on the planning committee, led first by I Tatti's director, Walter Kaiser, and during the term of the conference by acting director, Patricia Rubin; for their thoughtful contributions: Luciano Bellosi, Giorgio Bonsanti, Julian Gardner, Artur Rosenauer, Timothy Verdon, and Kathleen Weil-Garris Brandt. We hope to be able to recapitulate the excitement as well as the quality of the symposium in proceedings which I will have the honor to edit for I Tatti during the coming year.

Margaret Haines
Research Associate
Visit to the Scaffolding of Leonardo’s Last Supper

On November 18, 1996, the I Tatti Fellows were offered the exceptional opportunity to climb the scaffolding erected for the cleaning and conservation of Leonardo’s Cenacolo at Santa Maria delle Grazie in Milan. Observing Leonardo’s mural close-up from the scaffolding, the impact one felt must have been somewhat as Matteo Bandello felt it when he witnessed the great genius at work in 1494/97. The visit was conducted by Dr. Pietro Marani (Inspector of the Soprintendenza per I Beni Artistici e Storici, Milan), who is directing the cleaning. Dr. Marani had presented an overview of the findings from the cleaning in a riveting lecture delivered on October 10 at I Tatti. On the scaffolding, he vividly brought Leonardo’s painting technique to life. As Dr. Marani described, Leonardo used a tempera gessata technique more typical of panel painting (rather than the traditional fresco medium) to achieve an exquisitely graded work of cleaning Leonardo’s masterpiece, which she began nearly twenty years ago, in an attempt to control the deterioration of the fragile mural surface, resulting from the compounded structural problems on the wall, recurring water leaks, and blistering from the numerous layers of subsequent varnishes, resins, and pigments. The cleaning of the right-hand portion of the composition is now finished, and work has commenced on the left with a series of preliminary test patches. In their cleaned state, Leonardo’s colors are of an astonishingly cool tonality—unlike the previously dark, yellowish cast from old varnishes—but in keeping with those in smaller, recently cleaned easel paintings by him, such as the Portrait of Ginevra de’ Benci (National Gallery of Art, Washington), or the Virgin on the Rocks (National Gallery, London). From a distance, the monumentality of Leonardo’s painted light can now be better read as an extension of the real light emanating from the windows on the left wall of the refectory. Among the details recovered are the beautiful arrangements of still-life objects on the table, the embroidered motifs on the tablecloth (in a saturated blue hue), and the bold feet of the figures below the table. The greatest surprise, at least for this viewer, is the more powerful expression on Christ’s face, at the arrested moment of speech, and completely unlike the old benign serenity.

Antonio Fazzini, Carmen Bambach, and Ada Segre

Carolin Smyth (VIT’92) and Stefano La Via (VIT’92) are now married. They divide their time between Cremona, where he is a Ricercatore at the Scuola di Paleografia e Filologia Musicale, and Rome where she teaches art history at John Cabot University.

Carolin Smyth (VIT’92) and Stefano La Via (VIT’92) are now married. They divide their time between Cremona, where he is a Ricercatore at the Scuola di Paleografia e Filologia Musicale, and Rome where she teaches art history at John Cabot University.

Villa I Tatti
A chronological listing follows of informal talks and public lectures held at I Tatti during the 1996-97 academic year.
Institutional affiliation is not given for members of I Tatti’s 1996-97 academic community.

“Gli Affreschi del Beato Angelico nel Convento di San Marco a Firenze” with the participation of MIKLÓS BOSKOVITS (VIT'71-73, Università di Firenze), MARIA LUISA DE PEVERELLI (Thyssen-Bornemisza Foundation), DANIELA DINI, ENZO FERRONI (former Rector of the Università di Firenze), and ANTONIO PAOLUCCI (Soprintendenza ai Beni Artistici e Storici, Firenze).

A day-long “Symposium on Art and Religion,” sponsored by the Harvard University Center for the Study of World Religions, with the participation of HANS KIPPERBERG (University of Bremen), GRAZIA MARCHIANO (Università di Siena), LAWRENCE E. SULLIVAN (CSWR director), and Timothy Verdon (VIT'87, Stanford University, Florence).

SILVANA SEDEL-MENCHI. “Come si smonta un bestseller: Erasmo fra tipografi e censori.”

ANGELA FRITSEN. “Antiquarianism and Philosophy in the Late Quattrocento Roman Academy: Ovid’s Fasti as Textbook.”

CARMEN BAMBACH. “The Cartoons of Italian Renaissance Artists.”

MARIA LUISA CERRÓN PUGA. “Fortune e sfortuna di un titolo inovinato: Il Diálogo de la Dignidad del Hombre.”

KATE LOWE. “Queen Leonora of Portugal’s Patronage in Renaissance Florence and Cultural Exchange.”

MICHELE Ciliberto (Istituto Nazionale di Studi sul Rinascimento). “Giordano Bruno tra mito e storia.”

SILVIO LEYDI. “VT PQIESCAT ATLAS: L’abdicazione di Carlo V vista da Milano.”

ADA SEGREG. “Modelli geometrici e composizione vegetale: il giardino di fiori seicentesco.”

ISABELLE CHABOT. “La legge del lignaggio: norme e pratiche successorie nella Firenze del Tre-Quattrocento.”

ALISON WRIGHT. “Antonio del Pollaiuolo’s Dancing Nudes at Arcetri.”

WIETSE DE BOER. “Architecture and Comportment: Carlo Borromeo’s Instructores Fabricae Ecclesiasticae.”

A one-day symposium on “Santa Margherita da Cortona tra spiritualità e arte dal XIV al XX secolo,” with the participation of LAURA BATTISTELLI (Università di Roma “La Sapienza”); MANUELA BALDINELLI (Università di Bologna); FABIO BISGNO; JOANNA CANNON (Courtauld Institute of Art, University of London); PIETRO CLEMENTE (Università di Roma “La Sapienza”); LAURA CORTE; CHIARA FRUGONI (VIT’83, Università di Roma); SERVUS GIEBEN (Instituto Storico Cappuccini, Roma); ANNA BENVENUTI (Università di Firenze); RICCARDO SPINELLI (VIT’94, Università di Roma); ANDRÉ VAUCHEZ (Ecole Française de Rome).

GIULIANO DI BACCO. “Libri tre-quattrocenteschi di teoria musicale, ed’ altro ancora.”

GIOVANNA RABITTI. “Strategic editoriali e politica culturale nel Cinquecento: il caso delle antologie.”

EVE SANDERS. “Literacy and Theater in 16th Century Italy.”

A symposium for the VII centenary of the Florence Cathedral, “Santa Maria del Fiore: The Cathedral and its Sculpture,” with the participation of MICHAEL AMY (New York University), LUCIANO BELLOSI (Università di Siena), BONNIE BENNETT (VIT’87, Syracuse University); MARY BERGSTEIN (RISD), EVE BORSOOK; FRANCESCO CAGLIOTTI (Scuola Normale Superiore, Pisa); DORIS CARL (Thyssen-Bornemisza Foundation); GERT KREYTENBERG (VIT’88, Ruhr University, Bochum); ANTEJ MIDELODORF KOSEGARTEN (Universität Göttingen), LOUIS FRANK MUISTARI (Northern Illinois University), ENRICA NERI LUSANNA (Università di Firenze), MARIO SCALINI (Museo degli Argenti, Firenze), CARLO SISE (Galleria d’Arte Moderna, Firenze), LOUIS ALEXANDER WALDMAN (New York University), JACC WASSERMAN (Temple University), SHELLEY Z. ZURAW (University of Georgia).
COUNCIL NOTES

At the October 1996 I Tatti Council meeting, Chairman Deborah Brice recorded with sorrow the death of Agnes Mongan and suggested that a special effort be made to honor her memory by completing the $1,000,000 goal for the Agnes Mongan Curatorship of the Fototeca. Some $600,000 had been raised prior to her death. The Council quickly raised a further $200,000 in gifts and pledges, and there is every reason to believe the goal will be reached before year end. A memorial service was held for Agnes Mongan at Harvard’s Memorial Church in December at which Melvin R. Seiden spoke movingly about how remarkable a woman Agnes Mongan had been. (See In Memoriam, page 17)

Among other topics of interest raised at the October Council meeting, Director Walter Kaiser announced with pride the completion of the rewiring project and other renovations. He informed the Council that I Tatti now has almost enough fellowship funding and that every effort must now be made to increase endowment for the library and fototeca (see Mellon Foundation, page 3). Meanwhile Nelda Ferace updated the Council on the results of the Preservation Fund, details of which were given in the last newsletter.

In April, when the Council reconvened in New York City, Dr Patricia Rubin, Acting Director, reported on the work safety law recently enacted by the Italian government, and how it will affect I Tatti. Because of the many renovations undertaken in recent years, the Harvard Center is in a fairly good position regarding the new regulations, particularly with respect to fire prevention. This law will have a significant impact on the budget, however, as other areas now need to be addressed.

At the meeting, Debby Brice announced with regret Thaw’s resignation. Mr. Thaw has been a generous member of the Council for many years and the Harvard Center is eternally grateful for the Eugene and Clare Thaw Conference Fund which has provided annual funding for the I Tatti lecture series since 1986. It is also thanks to the Thaw Trust that I Tatti was able to hold a reception in April at the Pierpont Morgan Library (see page 8).

The Council is pleased to introduce its two newest members: Benedetta Origo and Timothy Llewellyn. Sra. Origo collaborated for many years with Enzo Crea in publishing the distinguished books of the Edizioni dell’Elefante. Long a friend of both Walter Kaiser and of I Tatti, she lives in Rome and at La Foce, her estate in Tuscany where she has created the celebrated summer music festival, Incontri in Terra di Siena, in memory of her parents, Iris and Antonio Origo. Timothy Llewellyn was formerly the Managing Director of Sotheby’s, London, and now heads the Henry Moore Foundation. His wife, Elizabeth, is the youngest daughter of Mason and Florence Hammond and an expert on drawings. They divide their time between their homes in London and Venice.

In May, the Council and all the I Tatti community received another blow with the news of the death of Sydney J. Freedberg, Chairman Emeritus. A memorial service will take place in Cambridge, Massachusetts on April 27, 1998. (See In Memoriam, page 17)

THE VILLA I TATTI COUNCIL
(as of 30 June 1996)
DEBORAH LOEB BRICE, Chairman
EDMUND P. PILLSBURY,* Founding Chairman
MELVIN R. SEIDEN, Chairman Emeritus

ANN H. BASS
JEAN BONNA
CHARLOTTE CABOT BROWN
JAMES R. CHERRY
ANNE COFFIN
RICHARD EKMAN
ROBERT F. EREBURU
GABRIELLE GEBB
MARY WEITZEL GIBBONS
WILLIAM E. HOOD, Jr.
MAURICE LAZARUS
TROLAND S. LINK
TIMOTHY LLEWELLYN
JEAN-FRANÇOIS MALLE
BARNABAS McHENRY
F. GORDON MORRILL
BENEDETTA ORIGO
MARILYN PERRY
ALTON E. PETERS
SUSAN MAINWARING ROBERTS
CRAIG HUGH SMYTH
DANIEL STEINER
DONALD J. SUTHERLAND
WILLIAM F. THOMPSON
EDWIN L. WEISK JR.
WALTER KAISER, Director
ALEXA M. MASON, Assistant Director for External Relations

*Honorary

Council member Gabriele Geier returns often to I Tatti.
Geremia Gioffredi, who died of bronchial pneumonia on June 19, 1997 at the age of 89, first came to I Tatti in 1929, and for thirty years he served as Mr. Berenson's faithful, trusted fattore and amministratore. No one was more deeply involved in the day-to-day life of this villa than he, no one did more to help create the atmosphere that characterizes I Tatti. During the difficult years of World War II, he more than anyone protected and sustained I Tatti, its inhabitants, its treasures, and its surrounding property. After Mr. Berenson's death, Signor Gioffredi continued for many years to assist and advise a succession of the Harvard Center's directors, and even in retirement he maintained a solicitous, supervisory eye over what went on here, giving the current director and his predecessors the inestimable benefit of his sage, informed counsel. Geremia Gioffredi was made a Cavaliere of the Republic of Italy in 1975 as well as Commendatore in 1982 for his services to the country during the second world war. His funeral, attended by the I Tatti community and many outsiders, was held in the I Tatti chapel.

Agnes Mongan, who died on September 14, 1996 at the age of 91, first visited Bernard and Mary Berenson in Vallombrosa with her sister Elizabeth in the late summer of 1929. She remained in close contact with Mr. Berenson through correspondence and visits until his death in 1959, and continued her association with I Tatti by becoming a founding member of both the I Tatti Advisory Committee, the group of scholars which chooses I Tatti Fellows each year, and the I Tatti Council, serving on both with distinction until her death. Overcoming Harvard University's ban on women curators, Miss Mongan became the curator of the Fogg Art Museum's drawing collection in 1947 and eventually the director in 1969. A pioneer in the study of drawings, she had a passionate interest in contemporary art as well. As President Neil Rudenstein said, "She fixed her keen eye on works of art as objects to be understood in all their detail — as well as in terms of their vital human and aesthetic effects. She was a scholar, curator, director, connoisseur, teacher, counselor, and friend to countless people over the course of many decades."

Sydney Freedberg, the first recipient of the I Tatti Mongan Prize, died at his home in Washington, D.C. on May 6, 1997 at the age of 83. Arthur Kingsley Porter Professor emeritus of Harvard University, chief curator emeritus at the National Gallery, Washington, Sydney Freedberg was a legendary figure in his field, Italian Renaissance art. From his first visits to Florence and his studies with Berenson, to his membership for almost two decades on the I Tatti Advisory Committee, and his membership of the I Tatti Council, of which he was Chairman from 1989 to 1993, he played an essential role in the life of the Villa. In both his person and his scholarship, he exemplified precisely those humanistic values to which I Tatti is dedicated; and from its inception he was one of the chief scholars who helped define its mission, shape its policies, advise its directors, and choose its Fellows. I Tatti was his Italian home. In addition to his many shorter visits to I Tatti, he was twice Professor in Residence, in 1973/74 and then again in 1980/81. Sydney Freedberg published extensively on Italian art and received numerous awards, including the United States Medal of Arts, the International Galileo Galilei Prize, and the Order of the British Empire (Military Division). He was made a Grand Officer of the Order of Merit of the Italian Republic and received honors from both the Ateneo Veneto and the Accademia Clementina of Bologna. A memorial service will be held in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on April 27, 1998.

Mina Bacchi (VIT’76), who worked for many years in the Sezione Didattica at the Soprintendenza ai Beni Artistici in Florence, died on January 3, 1997. She wrote extensively on Italian Renaissance art and her books on Piero di Cosimo are regarded as standard works on that artist.
In 1994/95 a series of three special programs was set up which benefit current and former Fellows from the Lila Wallace - Reader’s Digest Endowment Fund at Villa I Tatti. The indirect beneficiaries of these awards are the wider audience who would not otherwise have a chance to hear a lecture or read a book about the Italian Renaissance project pursued during a fellowship year. To receive a grant from the Lila Wallace-Reader’s Digest Lecture Program, each incoming Fellow is now asked to agree to give an extra lecture or seminar within twelve months of the completion of his/her I Tatti fellowship. Since 1995, LW-RD Lectures have been given in such diverse places as Sarasota, Dresden, Reno, Naples, Florence, South Bend, and Huenox, Switzerland. In addition, last year former Fellows received the following grants:

Lila Wallace - Reader’s Digest Special Project Grants:

Allen J. Greco (VIT’88-’97, Villa I Tatti). A grant to enable him to complete his book, Food for Thought and Food for the Table, to be published by Polity Press, Cambridge. This volume will explore the relationship between three closely inter-related domains: the food intake of different social classes in central and northern Italy (1350-1550), medical theories about human diets, and the problem of late medieval and early Renaissance classificatory systems (both botanical and zoological).

Lucio Riccetti (VIT’91, Opera del Duomo, Orvieto). A grant to enable him to complete his part of the text for a book, written with conservator Bruno Zanardi, on the bas-reliefs on the façade of the Duomo in Orvieto, to be published by Skira, Geneva, in 1998.

Patrizia Salvadori (VIT’95, University of Venice). A grant to cover research costs and prepare for publication her book on Florentine coats of arms, Emblemi del Potere: Stemmi di Famiglie Florentine nei Palazzi Pubblici Toscani.

---

Reminder

Villa I Tatti grants of up to $5,000 per person, from a total of not more than $25,000 per year, are available from the Lila Wallace - Reader’s Digest Publications Subsidy to former Fellows who apply to help subsidize the publication of a scholarly monograph or article on the Italian Renaissance, to help pay for photographs or other special costs of such a publication, to help prepare a manuscript for publication, to engage a research assistant, etc. Recipients will be chosen by a committee formed of three to five senior Renaissance scholars (plus the Director acting as chairman) chosen from among the I Tatti Research Associates, Visiting Professors and Scholars, and former Fellows. Proposals, which should include a brief project description and a budget, should be sent to the Director by 1st September each year. Final notification will be sent to applicants within three months. No more than five such awards will be made in a given year and preference will be given to applicants who have not previously received such an award.

In addition, Villa I Tatti grants of up to $10,000 per project, from a total of not more than $25,000 per year, are available from the Lila Wallace - Reader’s Digest Special Project Grant to former Fellows who wish to initiate, promote, or engage in some sort of interdisciplinary project in Italian Renaissance studies. Eligible projects would include conferences, publications, courses, seminars, workshops, or lectures which are interdisciplinary in character. No more than five such awards will be made in a given year. Recipients will be chosen by the same committee as above and preference will ordinarily be given to collaborative projects and to applicants who have not previously received such an award. Proposals, which should include a brief project description and a budget, should be sent to the Director by 1st September each year. Final notification will be sent to applicants within three months.
The day-to-day maintenance of the gardens and grounds includes watering, weeding, pruning, fertilizing, sweeping, mowing, tilling, propagating, planting, harvesting the grapes and olives, and making minor repairs, as well as constant inspecting for the much feared cypress blight which has caused havoc to the Italian countryside in the last two decades. Afflicted limbs must be cut off before the blight can spread, and cancer-resistant cypress trees are planted whenever possible.

In addition to these various projects and the daily upkeep of the gardens and grounds of the main villa, San Martino, and the Villino, much stonework has been replaced or restored in the garden recently; for the piazza serena, a soft, pale gray stone used extensively for steps, balustrades, and benches in the I Tatti garden and throughout the region, has badly deteriorated over the years. A major project completed during the past year was the replacement of the large stone bench at the foot of the Italian garden. This bench, some 95 meters in length, completely lines the parterre surrounding the area where the two reflecting pools lie. Most of the supports, also made of piazza serena, had broken over the years, as well as the seat itself, and it was concluded that restoration was not an option. Consequently, an exact replica of the parterre to the ilex grove were cleaned for the first time ever and the railings repaired. This will slow the disintegration of these stones, which have held up magnificently well since they were erected in the summer of 1911. To complete the restoration of this part of the garden, some fifty, cancer-resistant cypress trees will soon be planted around this lower parterre to recreate the ‘room’ that Cecil Pinsent had designed and which some pictures, recently found in the I Tatti archives, show to have been a marvelous piece of green architecture before the rather sad ilex hedge was grown to replace the original cancer-ridden cypress hedge.

To prevent further deterioration of the many pebble mosaics around the garden, an annual maintenance schedule to clean the mosaics and repair minor damage has been initiated. A local contractor, Tiberio Fantoni, has recently washed the mosaics in the giardino pensile and those in the central aisle of the Italian garden, removed the insidious mosses and grasses, restored loose stones and cracks, and provided a protective coat which has brought out the color of these mosaics, transforming them into outdoor versions of Persian carpets. He has also carefully restored, stone by stone, the mosaic at the foot of the Italian garden, following the original pattern.

The niche at the top of the cypress allée has also been completely restored. This entailed replacing much of the stonework there as well as consolidating, replastering, and painting the walls. The iron gates closing off the two branches of the stairs going up to the chapel were fixed and can now be opened and closed again for the first time in many decades. The I Tatti garden used to be known for its many different kinds of climbing flowers. Some forty new roses (some of which have been trained on bamboo fencing, some into olive trees, some up columns, some on walls, etc.), have been planted recently, as well as dozens of camellias, fremontodendron, and clematis. These are now doing very well and are slowly bringing the garden back to its past splendor.

Former Fellows Update

Allen Greico (VIT '88, 89–97), Administrator for Gardens and Grounds, is also a Renaissance scholar, whose areas of research include food and alimentary habits. His historical interests complement his technical knowledge of gardens and agriculture in a way that helps us maintain the Villa’s property both as a flourishing working farm and as an important and equally flourishing historical garden. For instance, Dr Greico is currently co-directing, with Daniela Lamberini (VIT '86), a thesis on the I Tatti garden by a student at the University of Florence. This thesis, defended in July, has already turned up a wealth of new material concerning the garden, including the various steps taken in constructing it, and is proving useful in providing some guidelines for its restoration.
While babies have been born to the wives of current Fellows once or twice in the past, Megan Holmes became the first current Fellow to give birth to a baby during her fellowship year. Lia Francesca was born in early March. Despite the baby’s arrival, Megan was able to finish her book on Fra Filippo Lippi, make headway on her project on 15th-century Florentine art and society, co-organize the informal series of seminars on gender in the Renaissance, and take part in a number of I Tatti excursions. Lia Francesca attended all the events as well, surely making her the youngest Renaissance scholar in the community.

Liliana Ciullini, who first came to work as a house maid for Bernard and Mary Berenson in 1946, celebrated her fiftieth anniversary at I Tatti on December 16. To honor her devoted service and wise counsel, an album of personal recollections, notes, letters, and photographs from many of the Fellows, former Fellows, friends of I Tatti, and members of staff who have known her over the past five decades was presented to her at the annual Christmas party. Photographs and memories came pouring in from all corners of the globe. Liliana is remembered by everyone who has passed through the gates of number 26, via di Vincigliata. Her regal presence presides over meals, her organizational skills keep the household running smoothly, and she remembers every scholar who has used the library and every child who has ever skipped down the corridors.

Congratulations are due to Amanda George, who celebrated 25 years in the Biblioteca Berenson in late July, 1997. Not only is she responsible for the daily management of the library, but she has a keen interest in photography. She has exhibited in the USA and Italy and is mentioned in David Finn’s How to Look at Photographs (Abrams, 1994). Amanda was presented with a Tiffany tray with the Veritas seal in celebration of her quarter century of service to the Harvard Center.

Anna Maria Busse Berger (VIT’93), professor of musicology at the University of California, Davis, received a Guggenheim grant for her work on memory in the Renaissance, a subject she began researching as a Fellow at I Tatti. She will be in Paris for the 1997/98 academic year working on her book, “Memory in the Middle Ages and Renaissance.”

Pier Massimo Forni (VIT’94) is professor of Italian literature at the Johns Hopkins University. His book, Adventures in Speech: Rhetoric and Narration in Boccaccio’s Decameron, (Philadelphia, University of Pennsylvania Press, 1996) was named among the outstanding books of 1996 in the magazine Choice and was in part the result of work he carried out while he was a Fellow at I Tatti. In publication was assisted by a grant from the Lila Wallace-Reader’s Digest Publication Subsidy (see page 18). He is currently working on a book regarding Italian poets and novelists of the Twentieth Century. He is also heading the Hopkins Civility Project, a cluster of activities— involving both the Johns Hopkins University and the city of Baltimore—centered around an international symposium on “Reassessing Civility: Forms and Values at the End of the Century.”

Erling S. Skaug (VIT’89) was appointed professor of conservation and history of art technology at Oslo University on June 1st, 1997. This is the first professorship of its kind in Norway. With a small administrative and laboratory staff, Skaug will plan a study program and build up a network of extramural teachers and collaborating institutions. In a letter he wrote recently to I Tatti, Skaug notes, “Conservation has thus finally become a normal university discipline also here, with the standards of institutions like the Courtauld in London, the Hamilton Kerr in Cambridge, and the Cooperstown to look to. The courses begin in January, 1998. With time we can offer a complete study progression from BA to MA and Ph.D.”
Publications

Volume 6 of I Tatti’s biennial journal, I Tatti Studies: Essays in the Renaissance, was published in 1995. It is, perhaps, one of the most varied collections of essays so far to appear in this series. A classic I Tatti cocktail, it contains essays in three languages and represents the research of younger scholars as well as that of well-known senior scholars. The Renaissance is defined in its widest sense, in a chronological range spanning from the 14th to the 17th centuries, and the mixture of disciplines (from art history to the history of literature, from the history of publishing to the iconography of marriage chests) reflects the diversity of scholarship I Tatti supports. The volume contains articles by Christiane Klapisch-Zuber (VIT’86) (Les Noces Feintes – Sur quelques lectures de deux thèmes iconographiques dans les cassoni florentins), Salvatore Settis (VIT’85) (Traiano a Hearst Castle – Due cassoni estensi), Ronald Witt (VIT’69) (What did Giovanni Read and Write? Literacy in Early Renaissance Florence), Andrew Butterfield (VIT’94) (New Evidence for the Iconography of David in Quattrocento Florence), Creighton E. Gilbert (VIT’63,’68) (Ghiberti on the Destruction of Art), Stephen J. Campbell (“Sic in Amore furesi” – Painting as Poetic Theory in the Early Renaissance), Massimiliano Rossi (VIT’93) (Per l’unità delle arti – La poetica “figurativa” di Giovannibattista Strozzi il Giovane), and Paul F. Ghezzi (VIT’94) (The 1615 Statutes of the Sieneese Guild of Stationers and Booksellers – Provincial Publishing in Early Modern Tuscany).

Volume 7 will appear during the coming year. Among others, it will contain articles by Michele Ciuberti on Giordano Bruno, Sir Ernst Gombrich on the Sassetti Chapel, Pietro Marani (VIT’82) on Leonardo’s Last Supper and its restorations, Arnaldo Morelli (VIT’95) on organs and church architecture, David Quint (VIT’79,’87) on duelling and civility in sixteenth century Italy, Francesco Sberlati (VIT’96) on feminine culture and pedagogy, and Bette Talvacchia (VIT’96,’97) on Giulio Romano’s Ugochi.

Published in the I Tatti series:

The editors of I Tatti Studies: Essays in the Renaissance welcome submissions from all Renaissance scholars. Manuscripts should be about 7,000 to 10,000 words long, and should be as accessible as possible in style, with minimum use of technical terminology. The editors are eager to encourage interdisciplinary approaches. Essays in languages other than English or Italian are welcome. All publications inquiries and requests for the style sheet should be addressed to:

The Editors
I Tatti Studies
Via di Vincigliata 26
50135 Florence, Italy

Published under the auspices of Villa I Tatti:

BEQUEST ESTABLISHES NEW ENDOWMENT FUND

With the death last January of Margit Minkin, a long time friend of the Harvard Center, I Tatti becomes the beneficiary of a large portion of her estate. In the 1970s, she and her husband Jerome, who predeceased her, had stayed on the I Tatti property in the Villino while Craig Hugh Smyth was director, and had fallen in love with Bernard Berenson’s estate and the work that Harvard has fostered there since his death. While unable to return to Florence from their home in Princeton, New Jersey, they had nurtured a long-distance love affair ever since. For some time the Minkins had corresponded with the Harvard Recording Secretary to discuss their testamentary plans for I Tatti. Indeed, in 1995, Mrs. Minkin established a Charitable Gift Annuity to benefit I Tatti upon her death, while providing her with a life income in the meantime. Mrs. Minkin’s bequest has now established a new endowment fund, the Jerome and Margit Minkin Bequest for Villa I Tatti, which provides for the operation and maintenance of the Harvard Center in Florence. Their thoughtful generosity will help fund many ongoing expenses connected with running a successful research institute, a flourishing library, the art collection, grounds, and the numerous other buildings on the property.

There are many ways United States taxpayers can help I Tatti, themselves, and their heirs. You might like to think about making a gift to I Tatti which provides you or your heirs with income for life or a term of years. Or you could convert low- or non-income earning property into a gift to I Tatti and provide yourself with an attractive income. Or designate I Tatti as the beneficiary of your life insurance policy. There are a variety of gift opportunities which can give you significant savings on income, capital gains, gift and/or estate taxes. For more information, please get in touch with Alexa Mason, Assistant Director for External Relations, Villa I Tatti, Harvard University, 124 Mount Auburn Street, Cambridge, MA 02138-5762, tel 617 495 8042, fax, 617 495 8041, e-mail: alexa_mason@harvard.edu.

I TATTI COMMUNITY

Fellows

ROEL BAGEMARK (University of Wisconsin), Art History. "Patronage and Place in Quattrocento Tuscany."

ANDREA BALKUCCHI (Università di Firenze), History. "Aspetti e problematiche della formazione dello stato territoriale Senese in età tardo-medievale."

DIARIO DEL PUPPO (Trinity College, Connecticut), Literature. "Poets, Scribes, and Enterprising Readers in Quattrocento Florence."

LORENZO FABRITI (Opera di Santa Maria del Fiore), History. "L’Opera di S. Maria del Fiore e il patrimonio fiorentino."

MAIA GARTH (Yale University), Art History. "Tempus loquendi, tempus tacendi: Representing Time in the Italian Renaissance."

LUCA GATTI (Collège de France), History. "Piero Corsini: A Controversial Figure in Late 14th Century Florence."

MERRITT GILL (University of Maryland), Art History. "Rule and Order - Augustine and the Arts."

KENNETH GOOWENS (University of South Carolina), History. "Refashioning a Renaissance Pope: Images of Clement VII, 1527-1534."

MIKAEL HURONQVIST (Uppsala University), History. "The Machiavellian Republic."

THOMAS MARTIN (University of Tulsa), Art History. "The Florentine Sixteenth-Century Portrait Bust: Meanings and Contexts."

PATRICIA OSMOND (Pennsylvania State University, Rome), History. "The Reception of Sallust in the Late Middle Ages and Renaissance."

MARCO PELLERGRINI (Scuola Normale Superiore, Pisa), History. "Edition of Volumes XII-XIII of the Correspondence of Lorenzo de’Medici."

BLAKE WILSON (Dickinson College), Music. "Music in the Society of Renaissance Florence, ca 1300-1492."

Mellon Research Fellows

SUSAN URBACH (Budapest Museum of Fine Arts), Art History. "Giovanni Sanzio’s Man of Sorrows with Two Angels in Budapest."

MARIAN WESOLY (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań), Literature. "The Contributions of Byzantine Scholars to the Italian Renaissance."

Visiting Professors

ALISON BROWN (Royal Holloway and Bedford New College, London), History. "New Men and New Ideas: the Intimate Circle of Lorenzo il Magnifico."

ANDREW LADIS (University of Georgia), Art History. "Giotto’s Scrovegni Chapel."

JAN ZOLOKOWSKI (Harvard University), Literature. "Dangerous Words of Aging Women: Attitudes toward the Verbal Activities of Old Women" and "Fairy Tales from before Fairy Tales."

The Research Associates are the same as for 1996/97 with the addition of ARNALDO MORELLI (Conservatorio Statale di Musica "Ottorino Respighi"), Latina, Università della Calabria, Arcavacata, Cosenza), Musicology. "L’organ in Italia nel Rinascimento: costruzione, funzione, prassi, repertorio."

VILLA I TATTI
UPCOMING EVENTS

On Thursday, October 16 at 5 p.m., Villa I Tatti will join the celebrations of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Kunsthistorisches Institut in Florenz with a special lecture, A Fraught Friendship: Germany and the London National Gallery, by Neil MacGregor, Director of the National Gallery, London. The lecture will be preceded by an introduction by former I Tatti Director Craig Hugh Smyth (VIT'74-'85) who will speak about the role of the Institut and its relations with I Tatti, Florence and the world of art history.

On May 14, 1998 I Tatti will hold a symposium devoted to medieval mosaics entitled “La Luce del Potere.” The focus is to be on technology, economics, and organization of labor in the countries of the Mediterranean basin. Participants, including archaeologists, physical chemists, and historians from Italy, Israel, Switzerland, and the U.K., will include Giuseppe Basile, Beat Brenk, Gustav Kühnel, Marya Mendoza, Daniela Stiaffini, Lucio Trizzino, and Marco Verità. Among the themes to be considered is the importance of taste, technology, and the availability of raw materials.

Lunch, the main event during the day when Fellows and other scholars can congregate to exchange views, news, recent discoveries, and thoughts on their current research, will be disrupted during the summer of 1988 when the kitchen area at I Tatti will be gutted and completely renovated in order to comply with fire, safety and hygiene codes.

In the course of this past academic year substantial progress was made in the planning of the international conference to be held at I Tatti on June 9-11, 1999, devoted to an examination of the paradigms defining Renaissance scholarship in the 20th century. A meeting of the international planning committee, held in New York in October 1996, divided the conference into six panels. The session chairs have agreed on the general outlines of their sessions and speakers have been invited. The working titles of the sessions are: “Renaissance and renaissances: the Text and its Histories” (chair: Salvatore Settis (VIT'85)); Migrations and Displacements (chairs: Anthony Molho (VIT'69,'72) and Patricia Rubin (VIT'87,'90,'93,'97); Cultural Products as Bearers of Meaning (chairs: Caroline Elam (VIT'82) and Jessie Ann Owens (VIT'80); The Mirror of Nature (chairs: James Hankins (VIT'89,'93) and Nancy Siraisi); Society, Politics, Religion, and Gender (chairs: F. W. Kent (VIT'78,'87,'96,'97) and Christiane Klapisch-Zuber (VIT'86); Antiquity and Recovery (chairs: Robert Gaston (VIT82), Ingrid Rowland (VIT'94) and Anthony Grafton). Speakers who have accepted the time of going to press are: Stephen Epstein, Paula Findlen, Franco Franceschi (VIT'94), Carlo Ginzberg (VIT'67), William Hood (VIT'85,'86,'90), Carol Lansing (VIT'95), John Najemy (VIT'70,'71,'75), Katherine Park, Gianna Pomata, and Christopher Wood.

VISIT I TATTI ON THE WEB!

Even if you can't manage a trip to Florence this year, you can visit I Tatti on the Internet. Our address is http://www.peabody.harvard.edu/Villa_I_Tatti/ There you will find information about the fellowship program, academic appointees, publications, and more. We will be updating the pages from time to time, so please keep coming back. We would love to have your feedback. Send a message to vit@vit.iris.firenze.it or alexa_mason@harvard.edu

Barbara Flores, who manages I Tatti's budget and oversees maintenance and construction

AUTUMN 1997
STAFF DIRECTORY
(as of 30 June 1997)
WALTER KAISER, Director

SUSAN ARCA MONE, Docent of the Collection
SUSAN BATES, Administrative Assistant, Secretary to the Director
KATHERINE BOSI, Music Librarian
PATRIZIA CARELLA, Receptionist; Secretary
MARGARET D’AMBROSIO, Cataloguing Specialist, IRIS
ILARIA DELLA MONICA, Reference Librarian
ANTONIO FAZZINI, Administrative Assistant to the Director
NELDA FERACE, Assistant Director for Administration
BARBARA FLORES, Administrative Assistant, Budget Officer
MAURIZIO GAVIOLO, IRIS Systems Manager
AMANDA GEORGE, Head Librarian
ALEN GRIECO, Administrator for Gardens and Grounds
ANGELA LEES, Secretary
ALEX M. MASON, Assistant Director for External Relations
VALERIO PACINI, Catalogue Librarian
GIANNI PAGLIAIULO, Assistant Photograph Librarian
ASSUNTA PISANI, Assistant Director for the Biblioteca Berenson; Nicky Mariano Librarian
AMANDA SMITH, Staff Assistant, Cambridge Office
FIORELLA GIOFFREDEI SUPERBI, Agnes Mongan Curator of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Century Paintings
GIOVANNI SUPERBI, Financial Administrator
ANNA TERNI, Reference Librarian (part time)

ACADEMIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE
(as of 30 June 1997)

WALTER KAISER, Chairman, Villa I Tatti, Harvard University
JAMES HANKINS, Deputy Chairman, Department of History, Harvard University
MICHAEL ALLEN, Department of English, University of California, Los Angeles
MELISSA BURLAND, Department of History, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
ANTHONY CUMMINGS, Department of Music, Tulane University
EVERETT FAHY, The Metropolitan Museum of Art
FRANCO FIDO, Department of Romance Languages & Literatures, Harvard University
CHRISTIANE KLAP FERCH, Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales
LEWIS LOCKWOOD, Department of Music, Harvard University
JOHN NAJEMY, Department of History, Cornell University
CHRISTOPHER REYNOLDS, Department of Music, University of California, Davis
PATRICIA RUBIN, Courtauld Institute of Art
EDUARDO SACCONE, Department of Italian, University College, Cork
SALVATORE SETTIS, The J. Paul Getty Center for the History of Art and the Humanities
CHRISTINE SMITH, Graduate School of Design, Harvard University
WILLIAM WALLACE, Department of Art History and Archaeology, Washington University

The I Tatti newsletter is published once a year. Alex M. Mason, editor and writer; Designed by Harvard Printing & Publications Services. Unless otherwise specified, photographs are by Susan Bates, Nelda Ferace, Walter Kaiser, Amanda George, Amanda Smith, and Alex M. Mason.

Former Fellows are indicated in this volume with the initial “F” after their name, followed by the year(s) of their appointment as Fellow, Visiting Scholar, or Visiting Professor.